Nicol's Captain Explains Why Passengers Were Drowned While the Crew Escaped.

investigation to ascertain the auses leading to the wrecking of the tug James D. Nicol was continued before Capt. James Fairchild and Thomas Barrett, of the Bureau of Inspection of Steam Vessels, at 10.30 o'clock this morning, in room 154 or the top floor of the Federal Building.

James C. Halpin, assistant superintendent of the Reeves Towing Company, was the first witness examined. "I made the arrangements with Mr Kirschner, of the Herring Fishing Club, for the use of the tug." said he "I did not tell Mr. Kirschner that the tug could be chartered to carry sixtyfive persons. My understanding is that he told me that there would be from forty to fifty people in the party."

The witness said that the only in structions given to the captain of the Nicol were to go to East Fifth street and take a party on board and collec-140. No instructions were given to the captain as to the number of people he

"No, sir."
Capt. Joseph Slattery, pilot of the tug Robert H. Sayre, which was near the Nicol at the time of the disaster, testified as to the weather conditions.
"The squall raised a big sea and made it pretty bad sailing at the time.
There were ninety people on the Sayre,
We picked up thirty-four of the survivors of the Nicol."
"As a light." "As a pilot of experience, to what do you think the accident to the Nicol was due?"

All Crowded to One Side. Well, the passengers were all crowd-to one side of the tug, and when e shipped a heavy sea, she was not le to right herself."

Admirably. They distributed them-yes evenly over the tug."
Do you think the Nicol would have better with fewer people on can't say. I don't know how many

The witness said that the Sayre was heading for inside the Highland Lights, and the Nicol was just ahead.

Cant. Philip Dick, pilot of the tug E. E. Evarts, said that he saw the Nicol founder. The sea was rought at the time, but he did not consider it in any way dangerous. He did not think the sea was high enough to have any way dangerous. He did not think he sea was high enough to have caused the Nicol to founder had she been properly loaded. Had she shipped an unusually heavy sea, of course, she would have been in more or less dan-

Fer.

The Evarts, which is 86.6 feet long, as against 76 feet for the Nicol, did not ship any water. The Nicol was from three to three and a half miles from land when she went down.

Capt. John Cutler, of the tug F. M. Vosburgh, testified that he did not consider the wind and sea high enough to have caused a tug to founder when the Nicol went down.

Master and Pilot George R. Mitchel, Micol with the tug R. J. Moran, said that he was also outside the Hook on the day the Micol went down. He did not see the Micol went down. He did not see the Micol with the knew the weather conditions at the time. His tug is smaller than the Nicol. He did not consider her in any danger.

gone out with his tug to bring in a ship had it been necessary. He had always regarded the Nicol as perfectly seaworthy. Capt. Robert Rogers, a licensed pilot and shipping agent, of 20 South street, testified that he had repeatedly examined the Nicol and found her seaworthy.

James Reeves, agent of the Reeves Towing Company, also testified as to the seaworthiness of the Nicol. He said the Nicol was owned by Lena Reeves and John and James McCarthy.

Capt. John Morrow, of the Robert Robertson, swore that he had known Capt. Hyde, of the Nicol, for a number of years. He regarded him as a capable and competent pilot. He had never known Capt. Hyde to take a drink.

Capt. C. Littlefield also gave Capt. Hyde a good character, and said he regarded him as a competent pilot.

Capt. John Hyde was recalled at his own request to contradict some of the statements made by members of the Herring Fishing Club.

"The members of the Club did not ask me to weigh anchor, because the weather was threatening. One of the Club Committee came to me and wanted to know if I wouldn't take them up in the Horse-shoe, where the fishing was better.

"I talked the matter over with some of the Committee, Some wanted to go to Long Branch, but I refused on account of the wind. When the storm sprang up the Nicol was the first vesses in the neighborhood to get under way. Five minutes before the Nicol went down I did not think we were in any danger."

"How do you account for the fact that all of the crew were saved and such a large proportion of the passengers were lost."

"Because the crew were sober and the

"Because the crew were sober and the passengers were drunk."
"How do you account for the fact that small boats from the steamer Algonquin and other vessels which picked up the sirvivors were able to live in a sea which was bad enough to founder the Nicol?"

Germany, since the spat with England upon the Congo treaty question, has been feeling much more sympathy for France than for years past, and the murder of President Sadi-Carnot seems to have increased the growth of friendliness between the two rival nations.

Well, the sea wasn't so bad. I've "Well, the sea wasn't so had. I've been out many times in worse weather. The tug was foundered simply because the passengers crowded to one side of the vesse' and caused her to list and shin a lot of water."
"Had you any instructions as to the number of passengers you were to carry?"

Kelly walked into Capt. Fairchild's office.

Kelly denied that he was employed as master pilot of the Nicol on the day of the disaster. He said he was the guest of Chief Engineer Farrell. He was in the pilot-house two minutes before the tug went down. He did not give any advice to Capt. Hyde about going inside Sandy Hook.

'I saw no water in the engine-room or anywhere else on the tug until she shipped two heavy seas in succession," said he. 'She was slightly listed to port just before she shipped the first sea. I have never seen the sea so twisted before. The foundering of the tug was caused by shipping more water than she could carry."

"I have."
"Did you recognize them as part of the Nicol?"
"I did. I'm very sure they belonged the Nicol?"

"I did. I'm very sure they belonged to the Nicol. I don't think they belonged to any other tug."

Engineer Farrell stated further that there were no indications of the bursting of pipes and the flooding of the tug from the inside. He also expressed the ouinion that had he not cut away the lifeboat a much greater loss would have followed.

At the conclusion of Engineer Farrell's testimony the investigation was adtourned finally.

Capt. Fairchild said he expected to have his report ready in two or three days.

Two straw hats and six fishing baskets were picked up by Hank Morz, of the sloop Seashell. The baskets were painted green, like those always used by the Herring Fishing Club, and the hats were the same kinds worn by the members when on an outing.

On the lining of one of the hats was the name in red "George Ehret Brown," and the other was inscribed "M. R. Cook." Neither of these names appears on the lists of missing or rescued, and it is, of course impossible to say whether the men were drowned.
